The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s misdeeds and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper with a face that was a study in sorrow. He tells his mother that he was whipped at school that afternoon and went to the bank and drew out that ten dollars he had collected for the Sunday school. He has spent it all in whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets a man who has been shipwrecked and allegiance. Tom and the new arrival easily become good friends. Tom tells the story all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his soiled clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “whale aller,” a kind of whistle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper time. He has been to school that morning and is still wet from it. He is perfectly satisfied. His clothes are wet through and through. He has been playing in the rain and now he is in the sun and Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has soared the short distance to the schoolhouse and shows her that his cousin is still wet from the rain.

The rain has been pouring down all day, but Tom’s half brother Sam is not on Tom’s side. Tom⟨s⟩ half brother is not a good boy. He is not a good boy at all.
