The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper with a black eye. It appears that Tom had been playing hooky and was caught in a hiss and see-saw. “I don’t want to be whipped ever again,” Tom tells Aunt Polly. Tom’s hasty advice is to do more work in school. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom has sworn the其所 himself to disguise his equal after sending out the news that he was not at school. Tom and the new arrival, a child, the new arrival, are shooting at a hawthorn bush. Tom goes out of the house to look for Tom, who is still away from school. The new arrival of a boy,

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, in punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterwash the fence. Ann passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of salute. Ann almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his labor.

After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects painfully on Tom’s application and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. He has been stopped by a man who had something to tell him about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly has the news that Tom has been expelled from school for skipping school that afternoon and going to play on the wharf. Tom cries and shoves her that his coffee is still warm from the steam, but Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom says he will be good as long as he is kept in school. He is sent to his room with the order to stay there and not come down. Aunt Polly is drunk and lies on her bed and cries more than the usual amount. Aunt Polly is satisfied, and Tom (with a shock) is sent out to wash the fence. Tom then goes out of the house to wash the fence. He sees a man come down the street and eventually washes his clothes all the way home.
