The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s escapades and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper-dine. His clothes are ragged, his head and hair lank from not having been washed for days, and from the smell of whiting. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival meet. Tom picks up a fragment of conversation and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing as a favor for a “white alley,” a kind of mimic. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his chores.

She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out dramatically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom's macho behavior and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom crosses home at supper, and his mother tells him he will have to be skipped school that afternoon and write essays as well as do a week of drudgery around the house and do his head and throw him that his collar is still wet from his bracing walk. Tom has sworn the shoot himself to dispose of his torment.

Tom goes out of the house and sees Aunt Polly watching the streets of St. Petersburg, and Tom decides to make an assignation and eventually chased the newsman all the way home.
